Closing down: Edward Davey MP speaking at the meeting at the PCT's headquarters which decided Springboard's fate Deadlinepix CG0149

'BOARD MUST GO'

Refusal to consider information and lack of visits to closed disability centre leads to resignation calls

by DAVID LINDSELL
dlindsell@london.newsquest.co.uk

Springboard will close, it has been announced, but its departure has led to calls for Kingston Primary Care Trust's (PCT) board members to resign.

The demand came after it was revealed last Friday that members had not read a 17-page independent report on the service and that only two board members had visited the facility they were discussing.

The centre for people with learning disabilities, based in the grounds of Tolworth Hospital, will be shut and its services will be handed to three charities, which could save the PCT about £420,000 a year.

Joyce Rhodes, whose son attends Springboard, said: "I am absolutely devastated. It is about money, there is no getting away from it. This will take away from him a place that he knows and that is safe."

Prospective Tory parliamentary candidate Helen Whateley called for the board to resign. She said: "If they follow the chief executive like sheep, what is their purpose?"

And Unison branch secretary Suresh Desai warned that the turmoil of being moved again – the third time in recent years – could permanently disrupt or even hospitalise users.

He said: "I find it very sad that only two people have been to see the place. Don't tell me it is reprovision. It is financial. Please don't throw them out on the streets."

The centre provides training in carpentry, printing and gardening, and its closure was the subject of a review commissioned by Kingston and Surbiton MP Edward Davey with the help of the Cranfield Trust.

Non-executive board members were only handed a report from expert John Angus of the Cranfield Trust, which called for more detail on the proposals, by an apologetic board chairman Dr Neslyn Watson-Druee at the beginning of the meeting.

Non-executive member, accountant Hywel Thomas, considered postponing the decision. He said: "From a governance perspective, I am concerned to see none of the executive have had the ability to fully consider the report from our MP."

But chief executive David Smith said: "My advice is that we need to bring the uncertainty around Springboard to an end."

After the meeting Mr Davey, who commissioned the report, said: "I am disappointed that the report wasn't considered as I think it could have changed and hopefully will still change part of the plans, but the PCT was always going to close Springboard and that has been the sad fact for nearly a year now."

The report's author, Mr Angus, said he was also extremely disappointed. He said: "It is rather strange that the MP has to invite another charity to help with what is really a consulting job that should have been done by the PCT in the first place."

Police raid pot factory

A cannabis factory was uncovered in New Malden after a landlord found his tenant using a rented house to manufacture the drug.

Hao Tran Khanah, 27, was later arrested and charged with the production of cannabis.

He pleaded guilty to the charge at Kingston Magistrates' Court on Saturday, May 17, and was remanded in custody to await sentencing.

Police said the operation was discovered when the landlord saw a television programme on cannabis factories and became suspicious his property in New Malden was being used to grow the plant.

The landlord visited the house in Byron Avenue and found no occupants but an extensive cannabis-producing operation.

A police spokesman said a downstairs living room and three upstairs bedrooms had been "completely full" with the plants.

The landlord reported his discovery and Hao was arrested the following day. The date of his sentencing has not yet been decided.

The arrest came in the middle of Tackling Drugs Week, a campaign jointly run by police and councils in London.

The project aimed to reduce drug crime and inform addicts about ways to get support and treatment.

Council member Tariq Ahmed said: "Merton is consistently among the safest boroughs in London but drug dealing and drug dependency are still among the main causes of crime across the city.

"It is vital we work proactively with the police and the drug agencies in their work to stop the producers and the dealers and help the addicts so they can come off drugs for good, and make a positive contribution to society in the future."

For help on coping with drug addiction contact the borough's community drug team on 020 8687 4666.

Parking tax claim denied

Fed up: Pensioner Brian Weston started the petition to get Sunday parking restrictions in the area

by DAVID LINDSELL

dlindsell@london.newsquest.co.uk

Anger has erupted over Kingston Council's plans to extend controlled parking in Knights Park until 10.30pm.

Kingston Chamber of Commerce accused Kingston Council of raking in evening parking charges in residential areas near the town centre to help finance the Rose Theatre.

The council approved sending out traffic wardens until 10.30pm in roads in the Knights Park area including Knights Road, Grange Road and Palmer Crescent.

Chamber of Commerce chief executive Lisa Gagliani said it looked like the council was introducing the additional "parking tax" to reimburse itself for money loaned to the theatre.

She said: "They have loaned the Rose Theatre a load of money and are under pressure to get it back but increasing parking charges to people who are going to be visiting the theatre is ill-thought out. It's essentially a tax."

Kingston Council has so far lent the theatre £8.4m, with cost overruns over issues including a lack of legroom, wiring and cabling adding another £600,000 to the original bill.

Residents who live near the town centre said it would prevent visitors coming to their houses and penalise anybody who currently parked their car on the street after work.

Brian Weston, 68, a retired binman, started a petition calling for the council to introduce parking restrictions in Knights Road, Grange Road and Palmer Crescent on a Sunday.

"Every Tom, Dick and Harry comes here to park," said Mr Weston, who is registered disabled and uses a scooter to get around.

"We decided we wanted [parking restrictions] up to 6.30pm but they decided they wanted it until 10.30pm because they would get more money from it," he said.

Driving him mad: Mr Weston is sick of non-residents parking in his road

Avenue Road will now be excluded from the changes after residents complained about not being properly consulted.

Council leader Councillor Derek Osbourne denied financial gain was the motivation for the change and described the suggestion as "daft".

Latchmere to collect reoffending evidence

Latchmere House resettlement prison in Ham is to reveal the number of criminals who go on to commit more crimes in an attempt to show its success reforming its inmates.

The governor of the prison, Steve Dixey, said: "Nationally I think they [reoffending rates] are fairly high.

"We are in the process of collating data to show what we offer here.

"Bearing in mind we have some 100 different movements here a day, with people going into the community looking for work, we have a very successful rate of discharged prisoners in employment and training."

Chairman of the independent monitoring board, Richard Vaughan-Payne, had said watchdogs around the country were struggling to get hold of reoffending rates.

He said: "It is extremely difficult as independent monitoring boards to obtain meaningful statistics in relation to reoffending.

"It would be appropriate or useful to know whether some regimes are more effective.

"There's such a reluctance from those that provide these statistics that I would rather not quote a figure as it is probably misleading.

"My own personal opinion is that we are confident that the regime at Latchmere House does have a considerable effect on reoffending rates."

More than two-thirds of criminals released from prison go on to commit more crimes, according to Scottish statistics compiled last year.

Door shut on the disabled

by DAVID LINDSELL
dlindsell@london.newsquest.co.uk

Electric doors for disabled people at the Hook Centre have still not been installed a year after it opened because the company responsible has gone into administration.

The revelation was made at a Kingston Council scrutiny panel called by the Conservative opposition to delve into the operating of the library and resource centre in Hook Road, Hook.

Erinaceous Consultancy Services went into administration under firm KPMG just as the council was looking at the final list of things to be finished.

Council officer Scott Herbertson admitted the original plan to have an electric door to allow disabled people to let themselves in and out had not been finished.

He said: "The only major outstanding issue is the electric doors for people with disabilities.

"They comply with access standards in terms of what is sufficient for people who are in wheelchairs to get through.

"But they didn't deliver what they put in their access statement."

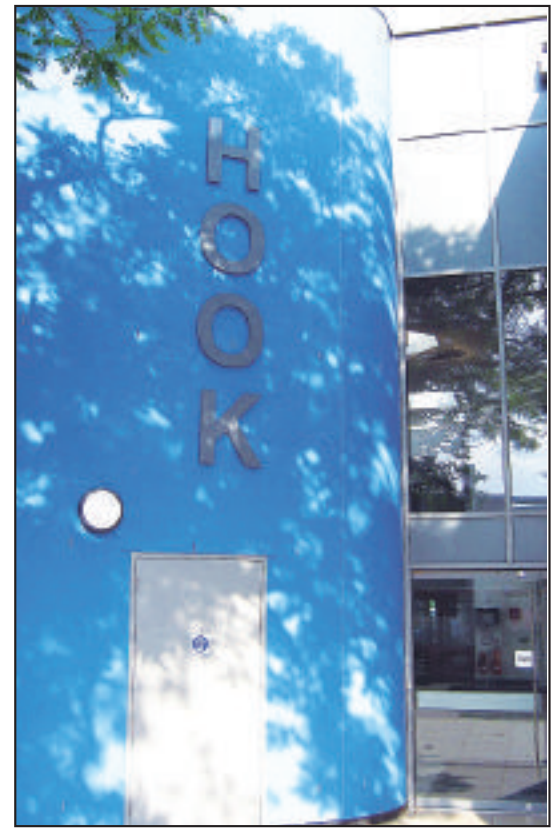

Rose Hurn, from Kingston disability charity Enhance-Able, said electric doors gave disabled people independence.

"It means they can have direct access to a building rather than having to get assistance," she said.

"It certainly wouldn't be their first port of call [if there was no automatic door]. I wonder why, if a business went bust, an alternative wasn't found?"

In November the café operator in the centre had its contract terminated and is set to be replaced.

Liberal Democrat councillor Rob Lee, one of the two members responsible for overseeing the centre, said: "It is easy to knock a good place such as the Hook Centre."

Green out of environment job

The woman who presided over the controversial Berrylands recycling trial has been ousted.

Liberal Democrat councillors voted Councillor Liz Green off the council's executive at a closed session.

Coun Green, who was executive member for environment, sustainability and climate change for Kingston Council, denied the move was as a result of the unpopularity of changes in bin collections.

She said: "There's lots of reasons to be honest, some of which I would rather not go into publicly.

"Derek Osbourne is taking over all the waste stuff which I think is a good thing as he is the leader of the council and the top man.

"There's no falling out at all over the waste contracts. Nobody makes any bones that it means changes for a lot of people, but we have to make these changes."

Parents meet with Tories to discuss schools fiasco

by MIKE DIDYMUS
mdidymus@london.newsquest.co.uk

Parents are still in limbo about which primary school their children will attend next year, and parents this week met with Conservative party members to vent their frustration.

Despite only 14 weeks remaining until a new wave of pupils descend upon primary schools across the borough, more than 200 children are stuck on waiting lists and unsure of where they will end up in September.

In a form letter sent to parents last week, a spokesman for Kingston Council assured parents they would receive an offer for their child during the first week of June, but this promise has failed to quash the fears of many.

Major concerns included being offered places at distant schools, requiring impractical journeys for working mums and dads, and the possibility the seven schools earmarked for temporary expansion by Kingston Council will reject such proposals.

Councillor Nick Kilby, shadow member for children and young people at the council, said parents were anxious about the information they had received so far from the council, adding that there was a need for urgency to sort out the situation.

He said: "The quality of responses they are getting is not acceptable, and we need to start giving them real information and timelines – no more mistakes can be made.

"I understand the parents' totally fair concerns about how their children are going to be taught this year, and whether this is going to be something that has a knock-on effect in the future."

He said that there were also fears from parents whose children already attend primary schools in the area that their education could be disrupted by the extra pupils causing a drain on school resources.

He said: "Parents with children who are a year away from starting primary schools also have fears that they are going to be faced with the same situation next year.

"The first priority, however, has got to be somehow resolving the problem that we have at the moment."

Police arrest seven in hate crime operation

Kingston police arrested seven people during a crackdown on hate crimes including domestic violence and homophobic and race-related crimes last Wednesday.

More than 1,400 cases of domestic violence and close to 300 racist and homophobic incidents were reported in Kingston last year.

However, police fear all three areas are still considerably under-reported by victims and concerned members of the public.

The arrests were made as part of the London-wide Operation Athena, an annual Metropolitan Police initiative aimed at raising awareness of hate crimes and highlighting the work of police community safety units which respond to such matters.

All seven people have either been charged or released on bail pending further inquiries.

Detective Inspector Brian Fitzpatrick of Kingston police said: "The police and partner agencies in Kingston are committed to stopping domestic violence and hate crime.

"This is an opportunity for members of the public to come forward and speak to us about issues that may be affecting them.

"I would encourage people to come forward and talk to police or someone else who can advise them on how to prevent further abuse."

Holy handshake: The Dalai Lama meets Lib Dem leader Nick Clegg and Edward Davey

'How the devil are you, Dalai Lama?'

Kingston and Surbiton MP Edward Davey has urged China to enter talks over its governance of Tibet, after a meeting with the Dalai Lama last Thursday.

The Liberal Democrat foreign affairs spokesman described meeting the Dalai Lama as a huge privilege, adding that Tibet's spiritual leader showed an amazing calmness and sense of humour despite the rioting and unrest that has ravaged his country in recent months.

Mr Davey said: "He joked that the Chinese called him a devil, but noted that he had no horns and that as a Buddhist believing in reincarnation he expected to outlive the Chinese Communist Party.

"It's clear that China would be wise to see an agreement during the lifetime of this Dalai Lama, as he has shown great leadership with his Middle Way policies of non-violence and Tibetan autonomy, as against the alternatives of an armed conflict and outright independence.

"Once this Dalai Lama has passed on, his successor may not be able to control those Tibetans who want to fight for freedom from China. China must work with this amazing leader."

Alumni's a star

A former Kingston University student is celebrating after starring in a box office hit. Ben Barnes plays the title role in Disney's The Chronicles of Narnia: Prince Caspian.

The blockbuster topped the US film chart on its release two weeks ago, making $55m on its opening weekend.

The 26-year-old has previously appeared in the fantasy movie Stardust and Alan Bennett's play The History Boys. However, playing Prince Caspian in the adaptation of CS Lewis's children's tale is his biggest role yet.

Ben studied English and drama at Kingston University, and his former tutor Frank Whately spoke highly of the 26-year-old who graduated in 2004 with a first class degree.

"Ben was inevitably going to emerge as someone very special – he is an extraordinarily gifted person," he said.

Mr Whately has known Ben for years as he used to teach at the National Youth Music Theatre, where the actor performed in his early teens.

Dad is chosen as face of equality poster campaign

by DAVID LINDSELL
dlindsell@london.newsquest.co.uk

Chessington man Kapil Kapur, who has a facial disfigurement, has gone from being a social outcast to campaign frontman for "facial equality".

The 39-year-old, who has a cleft palate, was picked on at school and looked over after job interviews. He was also becoming demoralised at being unlucky in love.

But now, after a remarkable turnaround, he is fronting a campaign for facial equality with Changing Faces, which aims to challenge people's perceptions through a series of multimedia messages and posters, and has settled down with his wife Kay, 38, with whom he has a two-month-old son, Krishnan.

The former Moor Lane and Southborough Boys student said: "It was hard in the early days because I had a lot of operations on my face.

"I was often bullied at school as well so that was quite hard to deal with.

"As a teenager I went for an interview at McDonald's and the guy took one look at me and said no. They didn't give me a reason but it was obvious. It frustrated me in many ways and was quite painful."

But Mr Kapur refused to let it hold him back and he went on to study maths at Warwick and Oxford, before landing a job as an IT contractor for the Department of Health.

Finding love was another matter.

He said: "There was a stage when I was younger when I thought I might not meet anybody. I went through arranged marriages but it just didn't happen. It wasn't for me.

"It was quite obvious it was the face. The Bollywood culture is all about looks."

He met Kay on the internet and when she told him she was interested in a man's mind they decided to meet up.

The rest is history.

Festival will make return

Comeback: A Korean dancer Deadlinepix KT14866

The Korean Festival will go ahead this year despite problems with funding, organisers have confirmed.

There were fears the Korean community's annual showpiece would be scrapped after a wash-out last year left event organisers, the Korean Association (KA), short of cash.

But Hyungbum Park, festival organiser at the KA, said: "We will go ahead with the festival near the end of August.

"We are using profits from last year and sponsorship money and we think it will be about the same size.

"We will be having more meetings in the next few weeks to finalise the details."

Last year hundreds of visitors expected at the two-day event were kept away by torrential rain.

The Korean community in Kingston – thought to number at least 20,000 – is the largest in Europe.

MP calls for bomb truth

Kingston and Surbiton MP Edward Davey has criticised the Government after it admitted being unsure of how many unexploded British cluster bombs remained in Iraq, Kuwait, Serbia and Kosovo.

He said: "These weapons have a terrible legacy, yet the Government appears to have no idea how many it has used.

"It is incredible the Government cannot even provide an estimate as to the nature of the threat."

Rain may sound final death knell for event

Mother nature did no favours to her protectors at the weekend, after appalling weather put the future of the Kingston Green Fair in jeopardy.

The 21st Green Fair became possibly the last on Monday, after the event was almost entirely washed out for the second year running.

by PAUL CAHALAN
pcahalan@london.newsquest.co.uk

Organisers were hoping 15,000 people would descend on Canbury Gardens after a financially disastrous event last year.

But after the festival became victim of the dreadful bank holiday weather again, Kingston Green Fair organiser Bernadette Vallely conceded visitor numbers had come up well short.

She said: "It is too early to say if there will ever be another Green Fair. We did not come close to breaking even and financially it has been very difficult."

Despite the soggy conditions, hundreds of people still attended the one-day event to hear the live music, take part in green activities and browse through stalls, Ms Vallely said.

However, the irony of an event trying to raise awareness of climate change issues potentially folding because of the weather was not lost on a thoughtful – but positive – Ms Vallely and other organisers.

She said: "Despite the damp weather, our spirits are not dampened. Our message of environmental education is not deterred, now more than ever with these increasingly strange weather patterns.

"We want to pay tribute to everyone who did come and make it a fun day."

Organisers claim the Green Fair, which started in 1987, is the UK's most successful one-day green event.

Family camp: Overnight storms failed to dampen the enthusiasm

Scout campfire warmed hearts

The 2nd Norbiton scout group turned back the clock over the bank holiday weekend, staging its first family camp for more than 15 years.

More than 50 scouts, cubs, beavers and their parents pitched their tents at the Walton Firs site near Cobham.

Overnight storms failed to dampen the enthusiasm of participants and a traditional campfire warmed hearts.

Using only rope, wooden staves and the occasional kitchen colander, scouts and parents conjured up a medieval style 15ft ballista designed to catapult water-filled balloons the length of the campsite.

Trudi Freedman, who was at the camp with her husband Simon and children Sam and Max, said: "It was good fun and I would come back again."

In Britain's prisons, as many as 70 per cent of inmates have a mental health problem or drug addiction. Life inside often only makes things worse, CHLOE LAMBERT writes

Mental illness rife among prisoners

MENTAL HEALTH
It's everyone's business

Found hanged: 41-year old father Mark Tate

In the early hours of a cold January morning at the UK's largest prison, an officer began his routine round of the cells.

The officer had 280 inmates to check on before the end of his shift at HMP Wandsworth. Most were asleep, but when he came to a cell on the fourth floor, the man inside seemed to be standing at his small window, looking out at the darkened sky.

The officer yelled for help and unlocked the door, but it was too late. Mark Tate, a 41-year-old father on remand at Wandsworth prison for smashing a car windscreen, had torn a piece from his green bedsheet and hung himself in the middle of the night.

Mark had been diagnosed with paranoid schizoaffective disorder 10 years before. Doctors recommended he was transferred to a mental health institution but it had not been processed in time.

Speaking after his inquest, governor of Wandsworth prison Ian Mulholland said: "As with all prisons, there are a high proportion of very vulnerable individuals and staff continue to make strenuous efforts in this vital area of work in dealing with a challenging prison population.

"I remain committed to the support of vulnerable prisoners and will continue to work with my staff to prevent such tragic incidents."

Mental illness is rife in the prison system, with rates of schizophrenia 10 times higher on the inside and depression, stress and addiction also rocketing.

A 2005 report by the Prison Reform Trust found up to three-quarters of men in prison suffer from two or more mental disorders, and at any one time as many as 3,000 prisoners have such serious problems they require urgent transfer to secure facilities.

Cramped conditions: Wandsworth Prison

Drugs are thought to be one of the reasons – people who commit crime are more likely to misuse substances – which can trigger a mental health problem or worsen an existing one.

Many have had traumatic life experiences and have themselves been victims of crime and abuse, making them less likely to cope with the life-changing experience of serving time.

Overcrowded prisons have also been blamed. Critics said the system was struggling to cope, with the prison population reaching breaking point, and self-harm and suicide showing a worrying upward trend.

Dr Jenny Judge, consultant forensic psychiatrist at HMP Wandsworth, said the cramped conditions of prisons today were not suitable for anyone suffering a mental health problem.

"If you look at a cell in a Victorian prison, it's designed for one Victorian person," she said. "Now they are two to a cell.

"It's a pretty high stress environment if you don't like your cellmate, or they have also got a mental health problem, and they are not washing properly."

Unfortunately, NHS mental health services are also overstretched, meaning those prisoners who ought to be transferred to an institution may wait in prison for some time before a bed can be found.

Staff at Wandsworth do their best to provide care and support to the high numbers of vulnerable inmates on their books.

Prison Advice and Care Trust (Pact) offers a first night service, to help prisoners come to terms with the shock of being given a custodial sentence.

Statistically it is in these first few days that a prisoner is most likely to take his own life.

If they are found to have a mental health problem, they are referred to staff at the prison who will assess the severity of their disorder.

Fear and stereotypes of mental illness exist in prisons just as in the outside world. Dr Judge said a better awareness of the issue would ensure inmates got the help they needed.

She said: "If it was felt to be less stigmatised, it would mean more people would come forward with issues earlier, and they could be helped before things deteriorated."

Name of the 2012 management game

by ALITA HOWE

ahowe@london.newsquest.co.uk

After taking the helm for the Commonwealth Game's triathlon in Manchester in 2002, Berrylands resident John Lunt has upped his game.

Mr Lunt, 49, managing director of Human Race, an event management company specialising in organising triathlons and distance races, will manage the triathlon for the 2012 London Olympics.

He has been organising sporting events since 1999 and is a triathlete and former manager of Kingfisher Leisure Centre, Kingston.

He said: "It is a once in a lifetime opportunity and this is such a prestigious honour for me and the area. My hobby became my sport and my sport has become my business."

He said it was his track record of organising events, including setting up the first triathlon world cup in Salford, that helped him through the gruelling year-long interview process.

"One hundred people went for the job and there was a rigorous weeding out process – 99 per cent of what they want to know is whether you can deliver and whether you will be a clean pair of hands," he said.

Mr Lunt will head to Beijing in the summer for a fact-finding mission and is confident he, and London, can come up with the goods for a world class event in 2012.

"It will be a valuable chance to gather information and look at their set-up and how the event is put together," he said.

His job will start full-time in 2010. He said: "As one of 26 competition managers, I will effectively start with a blank piece of paper and then be responsible for managing all of the functions needed to deliver a major sporting event the world will see."

Warm-up: John Lunt, pictured at the Royal Canoe Club, Teddington, will go on a fact-finding mission to Beijing this summer Deadlinepix TE20922

A prize moment

Fern Hill Primary School pupils had the chance to see their prize-winning plays come to life during a packed evening book launch at Borders' Kingston store last Thursday.

Ben Palmer, Helen Wang, Renee Mayor, Holly Goodwin and Maddie Stanton each scooped a prize in the latest Borders' writing competition, Short Texts for Performance, and their winning entries were performed on the night by students from Kingston University's drama department.

Staff and pupils were particularly thrilled as it was the second year in a row Fern Hill had won the primary school section of the competition.

The school received £50 and free copies of an anthology of competition entries, which is on sale at the Kingston store in Market Place.

Student win is in the bag

Fashion students at Kingston College will see their Bag for Life designs go on sale at Bentalls department store this September, after winning a competition.

Students were asked to design an eco-conscious, commercially viable and also fashionable Bag for Life in response to supermarket bags which have "become a symbol of our throwaway culture".

Pictured are Nav Toor and Natasha Lee, both 18, who designed a classic bag which will be sold in fashion and accessory areas.

Last year Bentalls challenged fashion students to design a range of customised t-shirts inspired by the 1960s.

Cash blow a reel pity

by DAVID LINDSELL
dlindsell@london.newsquest.co.uk

A Scottish dancing knees-up has been dealt an ill-timed kick in the shins after a bureaucratic bungle denied it cash for a 60th anniversary celebration.

Devotees of jigs, reels and strathspey have been dancing with the Surbiton and District Caledonian Society since 1948.

The society asked for a £500 grant from Kingston Council to pay for entertainment for an event in September with live band Dave Hall and his Scottish Dance Band.

Dancers do not have to be Scottish or have a kilt and the society currently has about 60 members.

But members of the Surbiton neighbourhood committee, which doles out the money for Kingston Council, said there were not enough jiggers from Surbiton to justify handing over the cash.

Ticket secretary Brenda Horwill said: "We were disappointed but it appears to be the set-up of the council. Because our name wasn't Kingston they referred us to Surbiton neighbourhood committee and we don't have over 55 per cent of members from that area."

The society dances to taped music on Thursday evenings from 8pm to 10.30pm in St Mark's Church Hall, Church Hill Road, Surbiton. For more information, call 01932 784866.

Stars shine at South London Business Awards

Surrey County Cricket Club takes gold at prestigious ceremony

South London businesses were in the spotlight as the winners of the South London Business Awards were announced at a ceremony at Crystal Palace Football Club.

Surrey County Cricket Club took the Judges' Award for Excellence as the best all-round company that stood out from all the finalists as an exceptional business. Based at the historic Brit Oval ground the club demonstrated that it is not only a leader in the world of sport but also succeeds in delivering the highest business standards across all areas of activity.

Chairman of the judges, Peter Pledger of South London Business, explained: "I was looking for a business that would be an excellent example of the range and quality of businesses we have in south London. It has established a significant international reputation, increased customers and revenue, secured a world-class event and is clearly engaged with the community that surrounds its location at the Oval. It is a great example of a 21st century business which does credit to the business community in the 12 south London boroughs and demonstrates that south London is a great place for business."

Organised by Priory PR & Events and in its second year, the business awards' evening held at the football club in Selhurst Park on Monday, May 19, is fast becoming one of south London's most prominent networking events in the business calendar.

Guests were greeted by a stylish celebrity couple, although not the stars one typically associates with this particular football ground.

The Posh and Beckham lookalikes added to the buzz, as anticipation mounted before the announcement of the award-winners.

Beginning with a champagne reception, followed by a four-course dinner, the evening proceeded with an Oscars-style awards ceremony hosted by LBC radio's James Max.

The finalists came from all areas of south London and represented the region's extensive range of industry, from mobile communications to physiotherapy.

Chosen by a high-powered panel of the region's leading business figures, the companies taking the titles included Physio4Life for the Small Business Award, Syscap Ltd for Company of the Year Award, Warren House for the Customer Service Award, BioRegional Development Group for the Sustainable Business Award, and CitySafe for the Innovation in Business Award.

Judge Paddy Collins of The Royal Bank of Scotland, commented on how Syscap won the panel over to scoop the Company of the Year Award.

He said: "The business is going from strength to strength and the CEO was able to demonstrate real passion around customer service. In terms of corporate social responsibility, staff were fully engaged, and there was a clearly understood strategy for the business going forward. Overall, a fabulous business and worthy winners."

With a 30 per cent increase in entrants this year, the quality of businesses competing for the top place in each category is a tribute to the growing level of commerce in the area.

The South London Business Awards is dedicated to continuing its contribution to the development of industry by encouraging the highest possible standards and recognising success in business across south London, and looks forward to the next business awards' programme in 2009.

Festival for the Wandle

by BEN THOMPSON
bthompson@london.newsquest.co.uk

The fifth Wandle Valley Festival returns next month, with its biggest-ever line-up of environmental activities.

Organisers hope that the events, from canoeing to archeological digs, will shine a spotlight on the Wandle Valley amid ambitious plans to regenerate the area.

Vicki Carroll, organiser of the event, said: "In this respect, the festival is the ideal way to showcase not just the river but the whole area.

"Looking forward, we want to make the Wandle Valley into a regional park that will stretch all the way from Wandsworth down to Croydon and will include the Wandle Valley Wetland area, the cycle trails and hopefully regeneration work."

The event will run on June 8 and 9, with more than 30 ecological or historical organisations involved.

They will be running activities and events in each of the four London boroughs the Wandle runs through.

Jane Howard, also a member of the festival's organising committee, said: "We're into our fifth year now and each time it's been more successful than the last – it's just getting bigger and bigger, and more diverse.

"There is a huge number of overlapping interests in the river from the environment to people, using it for sport, there is also its industrial heritage.

"It provides a fantastic ribbon through the area providing an invaluable green space for local residents."

Top Tip

❑ Get on your bike and burn calories not petrol. A half-hour commute by bike will burn eight calories a minute, or 11kg of fat a year. And for every five-mile (8km) trip you cycle rather than drive, you will save the planet from 1kg of harmful carbon emissions.

The Big Picture

❑ England is under threat of losing its most precious wildlife to climate change and development, a Nature England report has warned.

The government advisory body said the richness of the countryside had declined dramatically over the past 50 years, and is under increasing pressure.

Butterflies, native reptiles and grassland flowers had all declined over the past half-century, the study found.

Tackling the knotweed: Hogsmill Action Group with chemical spray

Exterminate! Weed faces a cull

Members of the Hogsmill Action Group were set for war as they began a summer programme of eradicating Japanese knotweed from the banks of the river.

On Friday, May 16, they began the battle along the Rose Walk in Berrylands, where the invasive weed has aggressively grown in recent years.

In partnership with Thames Water, volunteers have been spraying the weeds with suitable chemicals to wipe them out.

Japanese knotweed is not native to Europe, therefore the pests and diseases that control it in Japan are not present in the UK. In Japan, the knotweed grows in harmony with other plants and only grows to a fraction of the size it does in the UK. Its vigorous growth excludes almost all of our native species, which can't compete with the tall summer growth or the thick mulch of decaying canes and leaves in winter.

GARDENERS' GUIDE: Kingston Council has is to launch a new sustainable gardening guide to provide gardeners with information, tips and advice on how to make their gardens even greener.

The guide is intended to help gardeners reduce the ecological footprint (EF) of their garden.

Kingston's current EF is 5.6 global hectares (gha) per person per year, the same amount of land as 213 tennis courts per person per year.

The guide has lots of ideas of sustainable gardening practices to reduce our gardens footprint, including watering methods, plants to use, enhancing biodiversity, reducing waste and creating healthy, productive gardens.

To receive the guide or to find out more information on becoming greener, call the environmental services contact centre on 020 85475929 or email environment@rbk.kingston.gov.uk

From beer cans and old tyres to fish and firearms

The story of a "garbage warrior" is to be shown at Richmond Filmhouse, as part of its Environmental Screening Day on Saturday, June 15.

Garbage Warrior explores the story of Michael Reynolds, a radical US architect and originator of the Earthship.

The 2007 film shows his long battle to introduce environmentally sustainable housing, experimenting with unconventional building methods and materials such as beer cans and old car tyres.

He designed a house that heated itself, provided its own water and could grow its own food, with a self-contained sewage system and power source.

Also on show will be Darwin's Nightmare, a 2004 Canadian film about humans between the north and south, globalisation and fish.

The film charts the introduction of the Nile perch into Lake Victoria in the 1960s that resulted in almost the entire stock of native fish species being extinguished.

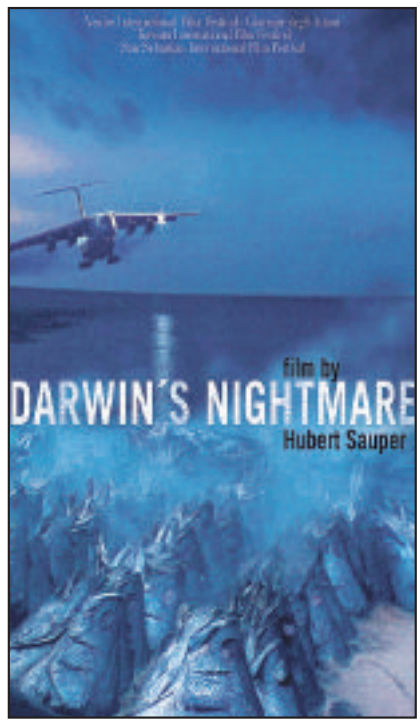

But its white fillets are now exported all over the world in return for guns and ammunition.

The film claims the booming multinational industry of fish and firearms has created an "ungodly globalised alliance on the shores of the world's biggest tropical lake".

Environmental Day takes place on Sunday, June 15.

Garbage Warrior is screened at noon and Darwin's Nightmare is screened at 1.45pm at Richmond Filmhouse, Water Lane, Richmond.

Q & A

Q: Each of us throw away 20 times our body weight in rubbish a year, but on average, how long does it take Britain to fill an area of landfill the size of the Albert Hall with waste?

A: (From last week) The Government committed to the Kyoto agreement in 1997. Since then it has set a separate target to reduce its carbon dioxide emissions to 20 per cent below 1990 levels by 2010.

Check the Green Guardian page next week to see if you got it right.

Serious fire and crash close Richmond Road in Kingston

A police van was in a collision with a car while responding to a fatal fire in Kingston this afternoon.

I feel very sorry for the family who have suffered loss in this awful situation.

This was a tragic accident. I think we all need to look back and see just how many accidents have happened in this part of Kingston in the last few months and ask why?

Fire fighters tackled a blaze in a New Malden home after an old bird's nest caught alight.

Who would have thought that an old bird's nest could be so dangerous.

It's a good job we have such skilled firefighters around to help deal with this sort of thing otherwise it could have been a tragedy.

Thousands have enjoyed theatre; why be negative?

What is it about your letters editor that mandates such an imbalanced choice of letters?

You take every opportunity possible to find fault with the Rose Theatre, almost to the point of paranoia.

How about mentioning that, since its opening in January, countless thousands of people, including me, have been to the theatre, enjoyed the quality and width of the shows presented and spent lots of money in the restaurants and bars nearby. I have also parked in the car park (more revenue for RBK), been on a Turks boat trip, had friends travel from Sussex to see a show, and been able to enjoy, for the first time in years, being out at night time in the town centre without being afraid of being mugged or worse.

JENNY ROBSON
Via email

Editor's note: The letters printed on these pages are a balance of the letters we receive and we are more than happy to print the positive and negative, but unfortunately it is usually the negative which triggers letter writing. We urge all our readers to contribute by emailing letters@kingstonguardian.co.uk.

There's a costly price to sing at the Rose

John McCarthy says "what about Kingston Choral Society using the Rose Theatre for concerts?"

We have been talking to the Rose about just that, but there is a small problem of cost. The Kingston University Chorus has the use of the theatre for free because of the university's funding of the theatre, while we would have to pay £4,500. This is more than 15-times as much as for Kingston Parish Church.

There is also the suitability for a larger choir such as Kingston Choral Society. The parish church has invested in raked staging so that the singers in the back rows can see the conductor over the heads of the rows in front: absolutely vital. There is just the flat stage in the Rose.

The choir will go on talking about longer term possibilities with the Rose, but we have dates booked with the parish church to the end of 2009 and have no intention of breaking that agreement.

In the meantime, we wish the Rose every success and look forward to giving occasional performances in the foyer, as we did last Christmas.

Give us service we deserve

The leader of the council, Derek Osbourne, gave the impression the Lib Dems have control over their contractors.

I am wondering if the leader of the council walks around looking at his feet and if the Lib Dem councillors take the form of the three wise monkeys. Can the Lib Dems not see what a poor state this borough has become, due to complacent management?

The grass verges are either overgrown or hacked to pieces, the green recycle boxes are left blocking footways and driveways. There are numerous potholes in the roads, the housing stock is in a poor state, opening hours to libraries has been reduced and there are a lack of school spaces.

Where is the quality control? How is this Lib Dem council meeting standards? Will the Lib Dems again blame it on the Government grant?

Even though they borrowed £164m and another £350,000 was given to the Rose Theatre, the theatre clearly comes above all other issues.

Now the Lib Dems are looking at the selling of buildings. Not the best idea when the property market is on a downturn. Would it not be better to let these sites out in case the council requires space in the future? Also, what right does the leader of the council have to sell off these buildings without a consultation? Why should residents continue to put up with a second-rate services?

Council debt 'incredible'

I chaired a meeting on Tuesday, May 6, at Market House.

It was called by the Kingston Trades Council, a committee of trade union representatives, whose remit is to monitor events in their localities that affect their members, in accordance with the social programmes determined by the unions. I am a member of Amicus.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss the recent exercise by the council to persuade council tenants to agree to a stock transfer and to explore its impact.

It was addressed by Alan Waters, chairman of the nationwide campaign Defend Council Housing. It was well attended and there was a lively discussion. In the interests of fairness, I called on the head of housing, who I spotted in the audience, to reply to the speaker, which he did at some length, before I opened the debate.

The council is in debt as a result of borrowing to invest in new build – the Government's attempt to encourage councils to undertake new building projects. I find it incredible that the council would take on these debts when it claims there is not enough money to maintain its stock, then expect the tenants to sacrifice their homes to get the council out of debt.

How will the new build – among them the Rose Theatre – benefit council tenants?

House talk is just too green

I am writing to highlight the recent tide of "greenwash" coming from Hemingford Properties regarding the redevelopment of 5 to 29 Coombe Road, New Malden.

The proposed 90 new homes is unsustainable in terms of its impact on local schools, health care and transport, not to mention the environmental impact of re-building a perfectly good set of buildings.

Refurbishment would be a far greener option with new homes built on a genuinely brownfield site. Please join with me in opposing the planning application cynically framed in "green" language.

Learn all about 'seniors' youth club'

Kingston's best kept secret! You would think that to be the case when so much is available for the over-50s at the Bradbury Centre that no one seems to know about.

So many of the older local population are either unaware or under a misapprehension of what the centre is all about.

Age Concern's Bradbury Centre is not a day centre like all the others, it is more like a seniors' youth club.

There is only one other one like it in the country and you can drop in any day and find so much going on – from lively activities such as line dancing, tai chi and yoga, or creative ones like art, languages, learning computer skills and patchwork.

You can also make new friends in discussion groups, chat about the latest read in the book club, go to the cinema club, go to the swimming or walkers group or have a game of bridge or scrabble.

And if none of these appeal then you are welcome to come in for a coffee or tea and something delicious and home-made from the café while you quietly read a newspaper.

There is reasonably priced hot food at lunch time too.

The Bradbury is only a five minute walk from the town centre in Grange Road, opposite the university and Bedelsford School.

Who will help to enforce Mayor Boris' drink ban?

From June 1, the new Mayor of London, Boris Johnson, claims to be banning the consumption of alcohol on buses etc, but this is not a new concern for the majority of the travelling public, but rather a long-standing by-law of Transport for London and moreover of its predecessor LT.

While welcome, however, we have to ask who is to enforce this because there are nowhere near enough dedicated police officers to patrol all the buses and Tubes.

Plus, bus and Tube drivers are not paid enough to deal with this antisocial problem.

Equally, the law only requires that users cannot board with open cans of alcohol but once on-board can simply open-up and start drinking, especially as most are out-of-sight of the driver. And from his/her cab, does the driver know if the can is Tennants lager or Lucozade?

When rowdy behaviour breaks out, it is obviously too late. What is needed is effective action to make passenger transport a pleasant and safe experience but popular headlines by BoJo is not necessarily going to make it so.

One team (and a dog)

Graham Dillamore is the gardens and estates operation manager for Hampton Court Palace. Ahead of the Hampton Court Palace Festival, he spoke to ALITA HOWE about what it takes to get the gardens tip-top condition and the role of Major, his eight-year-old Jack Russell

Garden force: Graham Dillamore with Major

Picture: Historic Royal Palaces

What does your job involve on a day-to-day basis?

I come in and do the normal things such as checking my emails and messages and then see if there have been any problems overnight – running the gardens is a 24 hour job. I will then talk to the staff about the day's objectives. I don't get that involved in hands-on work anymore – I wish I did – it's probably easier doing the work than planning it.

How did you get into the profession?

I like the outdoors and working with my hands – I was either going to become a carpenter or gardener. When I was 16 I moved from a small village near Portsmouth to central London to be a gardener, which was bizarre – it's like moving to Iceland to be a suntan expert. My first job was an apprentice gardener at Kensington Gardens.

What preparation do you have to do before a big event such as the Hampton Court Palace Festival?

It's a big event for us and it comes at the busiest period of any gardener's calendar, when everything is blooming and growing like the clappers.

We have two weeks to squeeze all of our work in and make sure all the flowerbeds are dug up, planted and ready to show off to the visitors.

What does it take to keep the grounds in tip-top condition throughout the festival?

It has to be maintained everyday to make sure the grass is cut, weeds are dug up and litter has been cleared. It's like the gardens go the hairdressers every single day.

We get a lot of satisfaction from seeing the gardens look good and to have 2,000 people come and enjoy the ground is a real buzz.

What is your favourite aspect of the job?

Seeing our conservation work, such as the restoration of the river banks, tree planting and creating ecological wild areas in the paddocks come to fruition. Sometimes with longer projects it feels like you can't see the light at the end of the tunnel.

What role does Major play?

We have lots of geese, which are welcome, but not when you're picnicking.

They don't respond to us – Major is the only one they respond to. We run him through the grounds every day before the festival and the geese soon get the message.

He lives here on the estate with me and is a daily working dog – he's like a part of the furniture.

Tartuffe act to follow: Roger McGough is adapting Moliere's controversial play

My French fancy

THEATRE: Tartuffe, Rose Theatre, Kingston

Simon Fitzjohn

For much-loved Liverpool poet Roger McGough, there are very few avenues still to explore in the entertainments universe.

A number one single in the UK charts? Check (Lily the Pink by his ensemble Scaffold in 1968). A blockbuster movie? Check (co-scripting Yellow Submarine, also in 1968). A best-selling book? Check (poetry collection Mersey Sound in 1967).

But adapting a classic 17th century French comedy for a modern audience? Now there's something to get the 70-year-old's creative juices flowing.

Approached to adapt Moliere's controversial tale, Tartuffe, McGough admits he was slightly daunted at first.

"I was surprised when I was asked, to be honest. "My first thought was to be flattered, then I thought I would be out of my league but didn't want to say no. I thought I'd have a crack at one of the scenes and see how I got on.

"After I did the first scene I thought, 'I can do this'."

Moliere's tale, originally banned by Louis XIV, is a cacophony of family troubles, religious hysteria, hypocrisy and political manoeuvring centring around the title character's attempts to usurp wealthy merchant Orgon. And for McGough, it was too good an opportunity to miss.

He adds: "I have written plays in the past so know what I am good at and what I'm not good at.

"I have never been good at character development and here it was all done for me.

"It is about people using religion for their own purposes and that is just as relevant today as it was back then. But at its heart is a farce and that really appealed to me."

The project was put forward as part of a calendar of events to celebrate Liverpool's year as European Capital of Culture. And for the Scouse legend, there is a feeling of immense pride.

"It is a great honour to be involved," McGough comments. "Liverpool has obviously been a backdrop to so much of what I have done.

"A lot of people had been asking me what I had planned for 2008.

"I did not want to write just another poem so it was great to get the opportunity to do something like this."

McGough will also appear on stage during the Kingston run to present an afternoon of his poetry. And he offers a reason for his long-standing appeal.

He concludes: "The thing with poetry is it appeals to different generations.

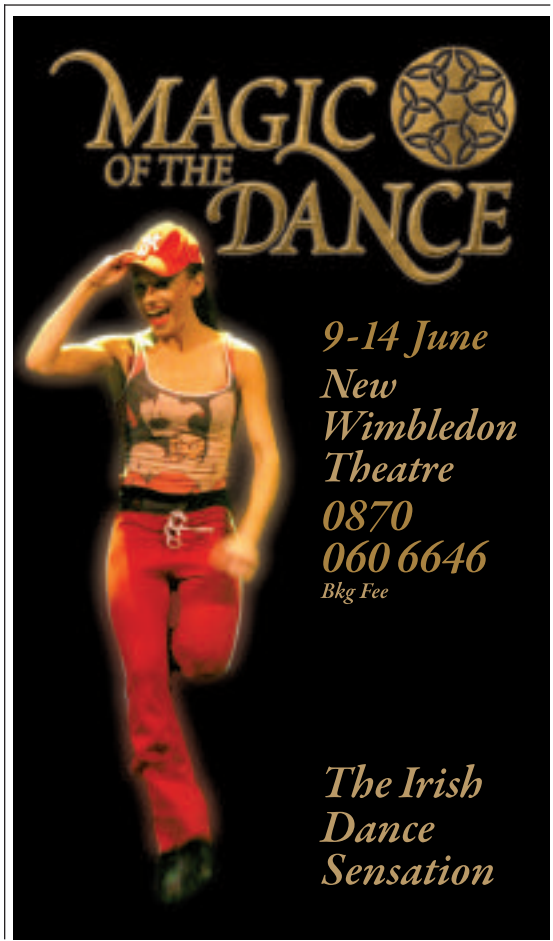

"I think people are fascinated by the feeling that poems can touch people.

"There is obviously comedy in my work but also a lot of emotion at the same time.

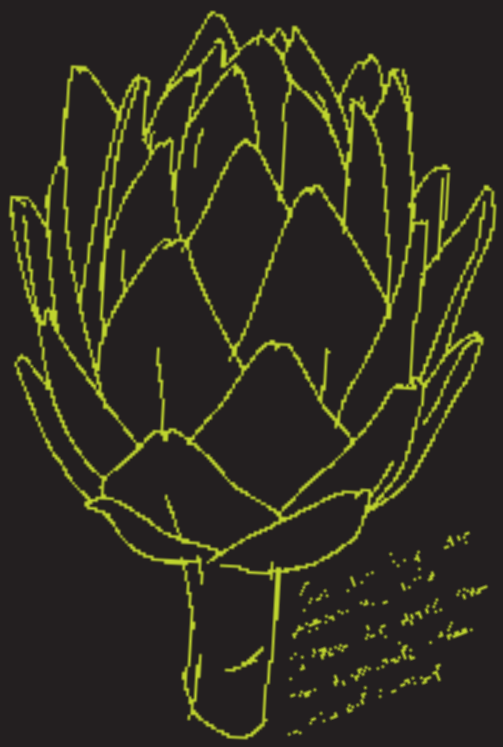

"If it was just pure comedy, I don't think people would come back."

Tartuffe, Rose Theatre, Wednesday, May 4 to Saturday, June 14, 7.30pm, £5-£27. Roger McGough, June 8, 2.30pm, £10/£12. Call 0871 230 1552 or visit rosetheatre kingston.org

Star quality

All-knowing, all-seeing computers have long been a staple of science fiction.

Think HAL 9000 in 2001: A Space Odyssey, Mother in Alien, or even Skynet from the Terminator movies.

But to British comedy fans, chances are Red Dwarf's Holly would also feature highly on any list. Holly was played by both Norman Lovett and Hattie Hayridge during the BBC programme's eight-season run between 1988 and 1999.

Now, 20 years on from the original incarnation, the two actors are jaunting around the country offering a stage show that doubles both as a string of witty anecdotes, individual stand-up and an impromptu Q&A about the halcyon days of Rimmer, Kryten, Lister et al.

For TV actor and stand-up comic Hayridge, the role was a total gift.

"It was originally meant to be just one episode where I appeared as Norman's alternate version. But then, in the meantime, Norman had contract difficulties and they ended up looking for a new Holly.

"I auditioned with about a dozen others, got the part, and the rest is history."

Hayridge has worked with the cream of British comedy since ditching her civil service job to dabble in the funny arts. Having written for the likes of Lenny Henry, Rory Bremner and Jasper Carrott, she is a writer in demand.

But Hayridge insists the three series spent working with the likes of Craig Charles remain a career highlight.

She adds: "It was a whole lot of fun. It was obviously very boyish but I really enjoyed that.

"I would film with the guys six days a week – I would wear a black turtleneck with a black backdrop but everything was filmed together at the same time so I got to know the others really well."

COMEDY: Norman Lovett & Hattie Hayridge, Rose Theatre

Simon Fitzjohn

Hayridge was disappointed to see her stint come to an end after series five, with the producers deciding to take things in a different direction.

"They said they had run out of ideas for Holly and had a much bigger special effects budget for series six so were ditching the character. When they looked at bringing Holly back, it was obviously Norman who returned.

"The interesting thing is, we each filmed the same number of episodes as the character."

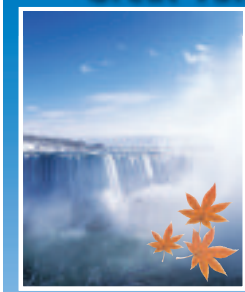

Despite her impressive career away from sci-fi comedy, Hayridge admits it is for the role of the Tenth Generation AI hologrammatic computer that she will always be remembered. And she expects a barrage of questions come the evening at the Rose.

"The thing is, people will always know more about the show than I do. So next week I am having to go back and watch all the episodes so I don't look too stupid!"

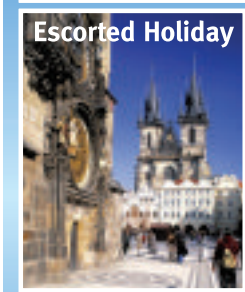

Double-Header: Norman Lovett and Hattie Hayridge, Rose Theatre, May 31, 7.30pm, tickets £10/£12/£14, call the booking line on 0871 230 1552.

The Boy is back in town

Sandy Wilson's memorable pastiche of 1920s life on the French Riviera makes a welcome return to the Surrey stage when Molesey Music Theatre presents The Boy Friend this week, writes Simon Fitzjohn.

A care-free musical depicting the glamorous side of life following the ardours of the First World War, the show has seen both West End and Broadway incarnations and a 1971 film version.

And for cast member Garry Vaux, the appeal is obvious: "Molesey Music Theatre has done a lot of shows from this period and they have been pretty successful.

"Something from this era is good. Vera Fletcher has a good audience base and so it was simply a case of finding something people would like and this fits the bill perfectly."

Vaux plays Alphonse, one of the French characters in the show about the trials and tribulations of lovestruck youngsters and the excesses of the elite.

And Vaux admits the location has presented its own problems: "Doing roles in a French accent is not easy but that is part and parcel of being in a show. You should always look to stretch yourself."

Despite the antiquated setting, Vaux is convinced there is plenty for a modern audience to savour.

He adds: "There are songs that are more well known than others and it is one of those shows that is very easy to follow. It is all about love and people can relate to that."

House rules

GIGS:
Dave House, New Slang, The Works,
Simon Fitzjohn

Kingston favourite Dave House may be about to hit the States for a long-overdue solo tour but he is not about to forget his roots anytime soon.

The talented singer-songwriter has crafted an impressive niche since first appearing on the scene as vocalist for the short-lived Lucky Thirteen. And when it comes to music, House insists there is no place like home.

"I think our local scene is one of the best in the country hands down," he says.

"It might be one of those things that gets overlooked by the average guy on the street but Kingston has become such an important stop-off for bands and people are flocking towards us like never before."

The artist, who describes his style as 'acoustic indie/pop with a punk/hardcore influence', has been at the forefront of that scene since debuting with Kingston's Current back in 2004.

Follow-up album See That No One Else Escapes (2007) garnered more praise and House reveals the transition from band member to solo artist was a smooth one.

He adds: "It's strange when people ask about Lucky Thirteen because, at the time, I wouldn't have described us as at all popular.

"To some extent, we burnt out because we were trying too hard.

"I just wanted to forget about the way you're supposed to do things and just jump in – musically, it was easy."

Following his appearance at New Slang, House departs these shores for the good ol' US of A, with dates in Brooklyn and Philadelphia, among others. And it's a trip he's relishing.

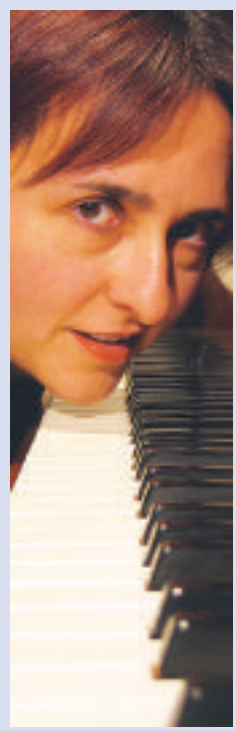

"There is an element of starting from scratch but that's not always a bad thing," he comments.

"I have never had dreams of selling millions of albums or having a guitar-shaped swimming pool, just being able to travel to different countries and play songs I wrote in my bedroom is one of the best feelings ever."

Dave House, The Works, Kingston, May 29, 9pm, £4, call 020 8549 5871.

Kate's keys to success

GIGS:
Kate Williams, Ram Jam Club,
Simon Fitzjohn

With her fourth album about to surface in stores, one would expect jazz pianist Kate Williams to be a little more comfortable in her own ability.

But try telling that to the London musician and you will be quickly shot down, as she explains: "I think, if you speak to most jazz musicians, they never feel ready.

"There are always things you feel you could do better. Experience does make things easier but you are never truly at ease."

Williams has amassed an impressive resume on the UK jazz scene after broadening her horizons upon graduating from the University of East Anglia.

And she admits her upbringing played a major role: "Most people in my family played something so I guess I was surrounded by music from a very early age.

"My grandfather got me into jazz as he was a jazz pianist in the 1930s and he had me listening to Duke Ellington, Fats Waller and the like which was amazing."

After dabbling in the jazz standards, Williams eventually moved onto her own compositions and, after putting together a top-notch quartet (with Steve Kaldestad, Jeremy Brown and Tristan Mailliot), things really took off.

Williams reveals: "The more different people you work with, the more you experience and the more exciting things get.

"The material I write is written very much with other people in mind. I much prefer working with others as it gives you much more flexibility. I do not really like working solo as you have no one to interact with."

And Williams is eagerly looking forward to her appearance at Way Out West, as she explains: "I think it is fantastic to have a place like that, to have a relaxed venue where people can come in and perform without pressure is great for jazz in London."

Green credentials

Lexus' RX400h aims to offer the perfect solution for those who want a big 4x4 but still retain an environmental conscience. Jonathan Crouch and family put it to the test on a holiday trip to Dartmouth

Perhaps in the motor industry as a whole, the jury is still out on the whole question of hybrid cars but the concept has certainly seemed to work for Toyota and its luxury car division Lexus.

Since 2000, the company has sold 15,506 Prius hybrids in the UK and a further 6,556 Lexus hybrids, the latter, the Lexus RX400h, which I recently chose for a West Country family holiday, .

When we first tested the car within these pages, we called it a 4x4 with an environmental conscience, two things that may sound contradictory at first glance. Nevertheless, it's difficult to know how else to describe it.

What other petrol-powered luxury 4x4 can you name that averages 35mpg and returns CO2 emissions of under 200g/km? What diesel luxury 4x4 can match these figures come to that?

The RX400h isn't cheap of course, but then you never expected it would be did you? Prices start at £36,415, with plusher SR, SE and SE-L variants offered respectively at £37,500, £40,310 and £45,280. That's a premium of just under £4,500 over a standard petrol-powered RX350.

This price difference can be explained to a certain extent by the fact that the RX400h is more powerful than its petrol counterparts, generating a healthy 272bhp.

This results in a top speed of 124mph and sprinting capability that can shame some hot hatches. In fact, this heavy 4x4 has jet heels, getting to 60mph in just 7.4 seconds.

By contrast, a UK specification RX350 will stop the clock at 7.8 seconds, so you're buying a markedly quicker vehicle, but how does this hybrid technology work?

The 3.3-litre V6 petrol engine under the bonnet isn't anything ground breaking, but Lexus has also engineered a pair of high-torque electric motors positioned front and rear that can either assist the petrol engine during acceleration or replace it altogether at start up or low to mid-range speeds.

Moreover, during deceleration and under braking, the engine switches off and both the electric motors act as high-output generators, driven by all four wheels.

The battery power level is constantly maintained by the engine-driven generator, which means there is no need for the system to be recharged from an external power source.

The batteries themselves are zero maintenance items guaranteed for 100,000 miles and are a lot more compact than you'd imagine. This sort of drive system is similar to that pioneered in Toyota's Prius but Lexus have finessed certain elements to suit the character of a luxury 4x4.

The RX has never been much of a mud plugger but on the twisty little roads around Dartmouth, it proved to be more than adequate.

An eco-friendly trip made possible by an eco-friendly car. And in a luxury 4x4! Holidays don't get much more satisfying than that....

Lovekyn Carens Test Drive

ADVERTISEMENT FEATURE

NEW CAR ROAD TEST KIA CARENS RANGE BETTER BY DESIGN

Kia's Carens was always one of those cars that found its natural niche. A new wave of more sophisticated mini-MPVs has done much to alter buyer's expectations of what these vehicles should look like and be capable of.

The ultimate testament to how well these vehicles are packaged comes when you try to lever an adult into the back row of a seven seat model. With most mini-MPVs their knees will be up around their ears and there's a very good reason for this. Not only is overall legroom limited by the sheer amount of cabin space required to fit three rows of seats, but the petrol tank is usually situated under the last row, forcing the cabin floor upwards. Kia has got around this problem by designing a shallow petrol tank that sits inside the rear suspension subframe. This drops the floor height by some 40mm, allowing for a more relaxed seating position.

Although the overall length only rises by 50mm, moving the wheels towards each corner means that the wheelbase and, consequently, space in the passenger cell has been extended by 130mm. While this was a move popular a couple of years ago, the quest to improve pedestrian safety has seen frontal overhangs grow in many cars. A full Euro NCAP safety test will show how well the Carens fares in this regard. With anti lock brakes with electronic brakeforce distribution fitted as standard, the Kia is in a respectable position to avoid impacts in the first instance.

Two engines are offered, both of 2.0-litre capacity, one petrol the other diesel. Kia's upgraded four-cylinder 2.0 CRDi diesel engine features a variable geometry turbocharger (VGT) that comes with a particle filter as standard. It generates 138bhp and has a six-speed manual gearbox. The twin-cam four-cylinder 2.0-litre 'Theta' petrol engine, with continuously variable valve timing (CVVT), produces 142bhp and, curiously, is offered as standard with a five-speed manual box.

The Carens faces a rejuvenated mini-MPV sector but does so with some serious weapons in its arsenal. It offers a value alternative to the customer faced with the prospect of buying used. A strong warranty and good reliability record coupled with a lengthy equipment list will be enough to propel the Carens onto quite a few shortlists.

Trophy draws top two Brits

Britain's top two female tennis players, Anne Keothavong and Katie O'Brien, will take part in the Surbiton Trophy.

Keothavong has just become the first British female player to feature in the world's top 100 since Sam Smith nine years ago – the 24-year-old was listed at 97 in the WTA rankings released on Monday.

O'Brien, 22, is at a career-high number 115.

Carl Maes, LTA's head of women's tennis, said: "I always believed it was a matter of when – not if – one of our players reached the top 100.

"With Katie at a career-high ranking, I believe she won't be far behind achieving the feat.

"The British women's game is in the best shape it has been in for years, with five players in the top 200 – Anne and Katie, plus Elena Baltacha (146), Mel South (153) and Naomi Cavaday (192)."

The trophy takes place at Surbiton Racket & Fitness Club from May 31 to June 8.

Surbiton hosts feast of hockey

Surbiton director of coaching Brett Garrard's appointment as Scotland U21 senior coach for this summer's European Junior Championships has given the Long Ditton-based club's members a rare chance to see their team in off-season action.

Garrard, together with Surbiton coach Karl Stagno, appointed as one of Scotland's two assistant coaches, has arranged for an international training weekend at Sugden Road, with matches against Surbiton on Saturday (5.30pm) and Sunday (2.30pm).

Alan's clocking up the miles

by STUART AMOS

samos@london.newsquest.co.uk

Kingstonian boss Alan Dowson believes he can handle the pressure at Kingsmeadow after expanding his carbon footprint to bolster his side's promotion bid.

The 37-year-old has spent the last three weeks orbiting London on the M25 as he steps up his search to strengthen the spine of a side that finished seventh in Ryman League Division One South.

Ks scout and former boss Kim Harris revealed last week the playing budget had been upped this season to help the club break in to the top five.

Dowson, who was in Brighton this week for talks with a prospective midfielder, hopes to bring in a centre back and striker by Friday after losing club captain Simon Sobihy to retirement last week.

And the former Walton & Hersham boss is relishing the challenge of returning Ks to former glories.

"I've been clocking up the miles over the last few weeks, but it is something you have to do to be able to sell the club to players and get a feel for them as well," Dowson said.

"The chairman could not have been more supportive with the money we have available, and he is happy to stay that way providing I'm getting value for money.

"I've got to fufill my part of the bargain now. I love the pressure.

"A club like Ks does not want to hear about five-year plans, it wants success now and that is what it deserves."

Dowson has put signing an on-field general at the top of his list after losing Sobihy and Gavin Cartwright this summer.

And he has pledged to stop a habit that saw his side drop a host of points to last minute goals last season, in matches Ks had led.

"I'm always one to rant and rave on the sidelines, but we need someone to take that on to the pitch," he added.

"We conceded seven last minute goals last season and that has got to stop.

"I'm hoping to bring in someone with more than 100 games in the Football League to make sure we get a grip of things in the final minutes."

Captain delivers: Malden Wanderers skipper Giles Puckle sends one down against Sutton in the Surrey Championship on Saturday, then celebrates a wicket with his team-mates. Malden won by 37 runs, thanks to a superb all-round display from Surrey squad member Stewart Walters, who scored 138 and took 3-25.

CRICKET: Kingstonian were held to a losing draw at home by Maori Oxshott in Division Four of the Surrey Championship at the weekend. Ks batted first and made 231-9 declared, with Amir Hussain batting through the innings to finish with 70 not out. Maori looked good to chase down the total before a late slump saw them settle for the four points on 214-8.

Meanwhile, at the Belgian National Championships in Gent, the women's light-weight double scull of Laura Newton and Emily Possnicker won a silver medal.
